TMDB Analysis Report

Introduction

Before a movie is released, can we predict if it will be successful? Are there certain studios, like Pixar, known for always making popular movies? Since even big-budget films can fail, it's really important for the movie industry to figure this out. People who love movies might care about different things. Can we guess which movies will be liked by critics, even if they don't make a lot of money? This is a great place to start digging in to those questions, with data on the plot, cast, crew, budget, and revenues of several thousand films. We use TMDB movie dataset for this purpose.

Inferences

1. The majority of films belong to the drama genre, and they often tend to be profitable.

2. English-language movies constitute the bulk of the industry, with a strong tendency towards profitability.

3. Countries with the highest number of movie productions tend to generate predominantly profitable films.

5. Directing is the most prevalent department in the realm of filmmaking.

Profitable and Unprofitable movies by department

6. The combination of a low vote count and vote average often indicates potential unprofitability. It is also conceivable for movies with high vote averages to ultimately prove unprofitable.

9

7. There exists a roughly linear relationship between vote count and popularity.
